Re: Burneson v. Stewart, 99 CV 2067

Dear Mr. Burneson:

I received a hand-delivered letter from you stating your concerns about perjury prosecutions. Since I heard the testimony and argument in this case, I know about your concerns that the Defendants had not been truthful. A decision to prosecute someone for perjury is a decision made by the district attorney. The courts have no authority to decide whether criminal charges should be brought against someone.

Very truly yours,

Kenneth K. Stuart
